#PEAK2018 APP AND SOCIAL MEDIA

#PEAK2018
There’s an App for That!

Sponsored by Conrad N. Hilton Foundation

You can hold #PEAK2018 in your hand! Use the app to build your schedule, find resources and speakers, connect with other attendees, and get conference updates.

Follow these steps to get started:

Used the app last year?
Look for the PEAK Grantmaking Conference app on your device, and use your existing app credentials to log in. Note: If your #PEAK2018 registration email is different from last year’s, follow the new app user instructions below.

New app user?
1. Search your app store for “PEAK Grantmaking Conference” and install the app. (In a browser: https://appsto.re/us/e8DIfb.i for iPhone and iPad and http://bit.ly/2lkLPW1 for Android.)
2. Open the app and click “Log In” at the top right.
3. The first time you use the app, you’ll need to create an account. Enter the email address you used to register for the conference, a password, and your name. Click “Sign Up.”
4. A confirmation message will be sent to your email account. Click the link to verify your new app account.
5. Click the #PEAK2018 image.

App Features

• Choose your profile preferences—directory listing, email display, and availability for messaging. You can change these selections at any time by clicking on the circle with your initials/photo.
• Explore the schedule, speaker list, attendee directory, exhibitor list, maps, and more by using the bottom menu bar (iPhone) or menu bars in the top left corner (Android).
• Create your schedule using the session list, and add your personal appointments. Note that seating is unreserved. Arrive early for the best selection.
• Filter the schedule by learning track, session block, and/or level to find the sessions of most interest to you.
• Use the Timeline to tag a session and add your thoughts and photos, or to see what other attendees are up to.
• In the exhibitor roster, create a list of must-see companies, and add your notes for after-conference follow-up.
• Be sure to download the “PEAK Grantmaking” app (white icon) so you can quickly link to the #PEAK2018 conference community on Connect.

But Wait, There’s More!
Questions about the app? Stop by the registration area, or send an email to Carolyn Sosnowski, PEAK Grantmaking e-learning and content manager, at carolyn@peakgrantmaking.org.
Welcome!

It is a pleasure to welcome you to our 13th annual conference, #PEAK2018, here in Orlando, Florida. For the next three days, we hope you will focus on making connections, learning new skills and ideas, and helping create the future of grantmaking!

We’ve worked hard to make every aspect of this conference as useful and informative as possible. You’ll hear from experts and thought leaders about topics ranging from compliance and technology to emerging trends, and diversity, equity, and inclusion. You’ll also have networking time to meet up with friends, introduce yourself to new people, and get the benefit of the expertise and knowledge that surrounds you.

And because we know you are ambitious and dedicated professionals, we have a few challenges for you while you’re here:

1. Make it a point to meet someone new with whom you will maintain a connection when you return home. The friendships and professional connections made at our conference can offer a solution when you’re stuck, a shoulder when you need to commiserate, or an insight when you don’t know where else to turn.

2. Go to at least one session that’s outside your comfort zone. Maybe you’ve been focused on compliance and could benefit from some skill building, or you’re a technology whiz but want to increase your knowledge of DEI issues. However you choose, do something different.

3. Take pictures that represent this conference and share them with us on Twitter or Instagram using the hashtag #PEAK2018, or on the conference app timeline.

We want to know what you think about this conference, while you’re thinking it. Near the registration desk you’ll find a FEEDBACK box and some cards to share what you’re thinking. Leave us one card or twenty, but let us know what you’re finding at the conference that you love (or don’t love).

Of course, this conference couldn’t happen without the volunteers, speakers, and staff who have worked to create a wonderful experience for you—we thank them for their hard work! We also extend our thanks to the sponsors and exhibitors for their support of this event and the profession. Thank you for joining us in Orlando and for being part of the network, which continues at the heart of the organization.

Again, welcome!

A Future We Can Trust
Trust-based philanthropy believes that funder-grantee relationships are stronger when they are built on the foundation of trust, rather than suspicion. Sometimes referred to as grantee-centric philanthropy, the concept of trust-based philanthropy is simple but powerful: empower the grant recipient to use its staff’s time and talents on mission-focused work. More and more grantmakers are taking steps to embed trust into their approach. Some are driven by the belief that efforts to create social, political, and economic equity will be more successful if philanthropy embeds trust, dialogue, and relationship-building in its practices with grantees. Others are responding to the current political climate which requires fast learning and reflective action. Learn from two leaders in trust-based philanthropy, the Robert Sterling Clark Foundation and the Whitman Institute, about their approaches to trust-based philanthropy and join our call to action to embed more trust in your practices.

Philanthropy During a Trump Administration: For Better or for Worse?
Given the overwhelming response to and interest in last year’s conference roundtable “Grantmaking in the Trump Era,” this plenary will advance the conversation about the impact of the current administration on the field of philanthropy. Plenary speakers will address the effects on marginalized and at-risk communities, racial and gender equity, policy changes affecting philanthropic giving, and the long-term impact on federal spending for social programs that affect the people our grantees support. This discussion will address how philanthropy can best strategize during this administration and beyond by leveraging human capital and lessons learned to maintain mission-driven work in a challenging time.

Lisa Ranghelli, Senior Director of Assessment and Special Projects, National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy
Jessica Bearman, Principal, Bearman Consulting
Over the course of several years, the National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy (NCRP) has explored the issue of feedback to grantmakers through its Philamplify project. The initiative has assessed a dozen of the nation’s largest foundations through comprehensive, nuanced examinations of each funder’s goals, strategies, and outcomes. Three hallmarks of Philamplify that, together, make it unique relative to other assessment tools are the application of a social justice and equity lens; the collection and analysis of anonymous feedback from grantees, philanthropic peers, and other stakeholders; and the public release of the findings and recommendations. Drawing from the wealth of data and lessons learned from Philamplify, NCRP developed a comprehensive toolkit, incorporating expert insights from a committee of leaders in learning and evaluation in the philanthropic sector. Set to be released in March 2018, the toolkit helps funders self-reflect and share how they build, share, and wield power. The free suite of resources will be valuable for audiences across the sector, including philanthropic consultants, foundation knowledge and evaluation officers, and grant managers. This session will explore what Philamplify has learned about how grant processes can support or hinder equity, and ways that foundation staff can seek feedback to course-correct.

Participants will:
• Explore elements of the newly-released toolkit in depth, including a case study and discussion questions
• Consider with peers how they and their organization would shift practice in light of the findings
• Be invited to use the toolkit in their organizations and have their experience profiled as a best practice in the sector

Careful—The Quest for Metrics Will Strangle Community Empowerment and Stall Impact
LEARNING TRACK: Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion
LEVEL: Intermediate
ROOM: International Ballroom—North
#PEAK2018 #DEI #empowerment
Robbin Thornton Hudson, Community Programming Manager, United Black Fund of Greater Cleveland
The heavy lifting of empowering communities is done on shoestring grants of $10,000 or less. The United Black Fund of Greater Cleveland (UBF) funds nonprofits who operate at the deepest roots of community catalyzing transformation and community empowerment. When foundations are metric-centered rather than empowerment-centered, they intrinsically create barriers to diverse, equitable, and inclusive grantmaking. RFPs, for example, are designed to capture information that some nonprofits can’t demonstrate, by metrics alone, well enough to earn grants. Often nonprofits operating at the deepest levels of community don’t have the “right” board members, audited financials, and evaluation reports to earn grants.

Participants will:
• Learn about UBF’s processes for co-creating strategy with partner nonprofits, inviting them to collaborate and co-produce efforts in order to maximize impact
• Understand how collective efforts are better competition for limited resources
• Explore how providing support helps increase operational capacity and organizational effectiveness, positioning nonprofits to approach and secure funding from larger foundations and corporations

Creating Dashboards My Colleagues Love to Use

LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices, Knowledge Management, Leadership, Technology
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Salon 6
@PEAK2018 #dashboards #grantmaking #outcomes

Ursula D. Stewart, Senior Grants Associate and System Administrator, New York State Health Foundation

From the CEO on down, well-crafted dashboards have enabled the presenter’s colleagues to work smarter and more efficiently, be more knowledgeable, and make better decisions. What leads to the creation of meaningful dashboards? Using her organization’s dashboards as an example, presenter Ursula Stewart will focus on the goals for creating dashboards, assessing the needs of each targeted audience, and the process of determining which components to include in each dashboard, including the significance of each component to the overall mission of the dashboard and the value the dashboard information has to the overall strategies of the organization.

Participants will:
- Learn what to consider when creating dashboards
- Review analysis of dashboard interpretations
- See examples of how analysis of dashboard metrics can lead to changes in strategies and policies

Impact Measurement Showcase

LEARNING TRACK: Knowledge Management, Outcomes/Evaluation
LEVEL: Intermediate
ROOM: Camellia/Dogwood
@PEAK2018 #impactshowcase

Brad Cameron-Cooper, Communications & Knowledge Management Associate, The Winthrop Rockefeller Foundation
Dan Goff, Grants Manager, May and Stanley Smith Charitable Trust and Stanley Smith Horticultural Trust
Tonya Newsom, Associate Director, Grants Operations, Salesforce.org
Erica Novotny, Director, Grants Management, Arcus Foundation
Mercedes Plendl, Strategy & Learning Associate, GHR Foundation
Patrick Taylor, Grants Manager, Zellerbach Family Foundation

This session will highlight how several foundations are measuring outcomes and impact, with a focus on the mechanisms and processes they use to collect, analyze, and share data. The presenters, representing a range of grantmakers and approaches, will give participants a brief nuts-and-bolts view of several different methods of measuring impact, with the hope that at least one of those methods will be relevant and applicable to participants’ organizations.

Participants will:
- Learn how to foster collaboration through the creation of a staff task force
- Understand how change management and updated processes are linked to collaboration and effectiveness
- Hear about lessons learned from selecting and implementing a new grants management system, and how to prepare for these projects

Investing in a Learning Community to Build Capacity for Impact

LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices, Leadership
LEVEL: Advanced
ROOM: Poinsettia/Quince
@PEAK2018 #impactcapacity #learningcmmty

Christina Ellis, Program Director, Advancing a Healthier Wisconsin Endowment
Tim Meister, Program Officer, Advancing a Healthier Wisconsin Endowment, Medical College of Wisconsin

Session participants will learn how the Advancing a Healthier Wisconsin (AHW) Endowment transitioned from being a grantmaker to being a changemaker. As part of this shift in focus, AHW launched an 8-year, $20M investment in 10 community coalitions across the state of Wisconsin to improve behavioral health outcomes.

An important aspect of the initiative is an investment in a full year of funded learning and planning and the development of a learning community to build the capacity of grantees. The learning community featured three primary objectives—gain knowledge, develop partnerships, and create effective implementation plans.

The presenter will share valuable tips on what to replicate—and what to avoid—and discuss methods for authentic community engagement.

Participants will:
- Learn the benefits of this approach
- Understand how to structure a learning community to build the capacity of funded partners
- Learn how to support community coalitions and engage a network of active partners interested in attaining statewide impact

Implementing New Technology to Create Organizational Change and Collaboration

LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices, Technology
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Fuschia/Gardenia
@PEAK2018 #orgchange #orgcollabs

Nora Mitnick, Grant Operations Manager, Russell Sage Foundation
Tierney Smith, Philanthropy Advisor, GrantBook

This session presents a case study on creating organization change by working together to update processes, procedures, and systems—making the organization both more collaborative and effective. The case study follows the Russell Sage Foundation’s experience of selecting and implementing a new grants management system and updating organization processes, including creating digital files, conducting an IT audit, and implementing new policies.

Participants will:
- Learn how to engage and support employees in times of natural disaster
- Learn how to take best practices for setting up an employee assistance fund
- Understand how employees can be engaged through giving and volunteering
- Receive information on the latest natural disaster philanthropy resources available

Effective—by meeting short- and long-term needs while taking into account community and employee needs, as well as corporate reputation.
Walking the Talk—Leading with Values

LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Salon 7

[@peakgrantmaking #walkthetalk]

Nikki Powell, Communications and Practices Director, PEAK Grantmaking

Over the past year PEAK Grantmaking has spread the word across the country that now more than ever, funders are thinking about how to “walk the talk” — how to identify their institutional values and embed these values into their grantmaking practices. We’ve had frank and robust conversations with a majority of PEAK Regional Chapters and are grateful to them for not only approaching this topic with an open mind but also helping us learn from their own experiences. In addition to sharing what we learned from our members, in this session we will review some of the key findings from our research, provide concrete skills to identify ways to align grantmaking practice with values within your own authority, and initiate conversations with colleagues and organizational leaders to make an impact across the organization. We also will feature a case study from the Hewlett Foundation, which went through an institutional values review and recently codified how the values translate into day-to-day grant practices. You’ll hear about the process they went through and how they think about walking the talk.

Participants will:
- Learn about the critical importance of articulating organizational values and putting values into practice
- Understand how your organization is doing in aligning practices with values and learn how to enact positive changes within your areas of authority
- Discover skills and increase capacity to enlist colleagues and leadership in collaborative efforts to articulate and “live” organizational values
- Engage in discussions with your session colleagues about steps you can take to help your organization to “walk the talk”

Getting the Real Story from Nonprofit Financials

LEARNING TRACK: Compliance, Effective Practices
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Salon 8

[@peakgrantmaking #nonprofit #financials]

Hilda Polanco, Founder & CEO, FMA

Financials are just one piece of the story when considering whether or not to make a grant. Coupled with open conversation, financials can provide insights into a nonprofit’s financial situation, sustainability, and overall organizational capacity. Learn how to look at nonprofit financials beyond the numbers and with an eye toward trends in the field.

Participants will:
- Learn how to recognize signs of a financially healthy nonprofit, with a focus on an organization’s unique circumstances
- Discuss how to engage nonprofits in conversations about their financial situation and true needs
- Identify financial red flags that warrant further conversation and understand how to formulate appropriate questions based on those red flags

Grantmaking 2.0: Helmsley’s Story of Updating Its Grants Management Processes

Rebecca Von Sickie, Managing Partner, 1892 consulting

Experienced grantmakers interested in learning from other grantmakers about how they revised and updated their grants management practices will find this session helpful. Using the example of The Leona M. and Harry B. Helmsley Charitable Trust’s efforts to update their practices, the presenters will share lessons learned and best practices for making your own practice updates.

Participants will:
- Learn how to prepare for a grants management database system transition
- Understand how to engage departments across your organization
- Hear best practices for process redesign

Managing Legal and Compliance Issues at Every Stage of the Grant Cycle

LEARNING TRACK: Compliance
LEVEL: Intermediate
ROOM: Salon 7

[@peakgrantmaking #compliance]

Carly Leinheiser, Attorney, Robinson & Cole

In this session, we’ll examine the unique laws and regulations governing grantmaking by private foundations, as well as specific legal and compliance issues at each stage in the grantmaking process. We’ll cover specific strategies for investigating applicants and verifying an applicant’s tax-exempt status, and explore how to structure grants to comply with private foundation excise tax rules and specific requirements for making expenditure responsibility grants and other complex grants or disbursements.

Other session topics include the grant agreement and its role in establishing expectations and a shared understanding between the foundation and the grantee, key provisions normally found in grant agreements, and simple letter agreements versus shared understanding between the foundation and its role in establishing expectations and a shared understanding between the foundation and the grantee, key provisions normally found in grant agreements, and simple letter agreements versus more complex multi-page agreements. We’ll also cover grantee reporting responsibilities and the foundation’s obligation to monitor the grantee’s expenditures of grant funds, plus a few concrete steps you can take to help your foundation manage its legal and compliance obligations.

Participants will:
- Gain a better understanding of the laws and regulations governing private foundations and the legal and compliance obligations that apply at each stage of the grant cycle
- Understand how to comply with taxable expenditure rules by making grants only for permitted charitable purposes and exercising expenditure responsibility when required
- Understand common grant agreement provisions and learn to review and improve draft agreements by identifying ambiguous, overly complex, or difficult language

Flora Maria Garcia, President & CEO, United Arts of Central Florida
Deborah A. Clements, Government & Community Relations Manager, Duke Energy
Sharon Arroyo, Director-Florida Large Account Management, Duke Energy
Margaret Spontak, Stakeholder Philanthropy Manager, Duke Energy Foundation

Given the distinct disconnect regarding diversity and inclusion among the programs, audiences, and boards of Central Florida’s cultural groups, for the past two years United Arts of Central Florida has focused its efforts—supported by a generous grant from Duke Energy—to address the disconnect through education, grantmaking practices, targeted funding, programming, and publicity. United Arts has seen positive results from these efforts over the past few years, including a notably diverse audience for the “Arts for All Day” showcase featuring more than fifty funded groups and 6,000 attendees—27% of whom had never attended a local cultural event. In this session, you’ll hear more about United Arts’ strategies and activities, and learn from their successes.

Not only have philanthropists come up short on ocean conservation in recent years (just 1 percent of philanthropic funding since 2009 has gone to ocean projects), we also suffer from a lack of coordination. In 2017, Foundation Center and a group of partners launched FundingTheOcean.org to address this issue. The site is an open-access, peer-to-peer sharing resource that will be continually updated to provide best practices, targeted funding, programming, and inclusion among the programs, audiences, and boards of Central Florida’s cultural groups.

The Role of Grants Managers in Bridging Microcultures

LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices, Leadership
LEVEL: Intermediate
ROOM: Kahili/Lily

#PEAK2018 #grantsmgt #microcultures
Kerry Medek, Director, Grants Management and Learning, GHR Foundation
Amy Shields, Program Manager, Grantmakers for Effective Organizations (GEO)

The role of grants managers has shifted from focusing on due diligence and recordkeeping to providing expertise on process, learning, and relationships. In other words, grants managers play a cross-functional role in shaping organizational culture. Within every organization, however, are microcultures that influence how people do their work and which may help or hurt the greater organizational culture. By understanding the microcultures in their organizations, grants managers can better facilitate solutions that best serve the whole organization.

In this session, participants will learn what microcultures are and identify some of the microcultures that exist in their own organizations. Participants will think through how these microcultures do or do not contribute to their organization’s overall effectiveness before brainstorming ways to bridge microcultures so their organizations can best support their grantees.

Participants will:
- Understand what microcultures are and why they matter to organizational effectiveness
- Learn how to identify microcultures in their own organization and determine their impact on productive organizational culture
- Brainstorm with their peers about what they’ve done to bridge and support positive microcultures

Sharing information about your foundation’s grantmaking can be a powerful way to amplify your organization’s impact. Yet, depending on the context, being open can also pose risks. Long a concern of human rights funders, the issue of data protection has been gaining prominence among funders working in other fields, from the environment to immigration to gun control. Join us in this working session to explore what you should consider when sharing your grants data, as well as your options for being open even in challenging circumstances.

Participants will:
- Determine how to decide how and when to share their grants data
- Learn how others have approached challenging decisions around data sharing
- Understand the spectrum of options available for sharing

Henry A. Bromelkamp, President, Bromelkamp Company LLC

Why is software integration essential to your success? From databases to due diligence tools (GuideStar, CRA, etc.) to online banking and payment systems, you probably use an assortment of software solutions to accomplish your day-to-day work. While these technologies are meant to make your job easier, every time you re-type something there’s opportunity for error—not to mention the inefficiency of dual data entry, the need to reconcile systems, and manual aggregation for reporting. Make your life easier by choosing software that works well together.

Technology companies tout their ability to integrate with other products or services, but “integration” can mean different things and may not be smooth or painless. Our industry has progressed from importing and exporting to APIs, bridges, and web services. Learn how to take these functions into consideration when creating your technology plan by asking yourself these important questions: What integration features should I look for when considering new... solutions? What factors should I consider when deciding to integrate programs or data sources? Do I have fail-safe plans if integration is compromised? Is there ever a time when integration is a bad idea? Join Henry A. Bromelkamp to learn the answers to all of these questions and more!

Participants will:
- Learn different integration methods
- Understand how integrations can save time for grantmakers
- Hear factors to consider when determining whether to integrate

Equity isn’t always on everyone’s radar, and yet it needs to be more than in our individual hearts. Even if it’s not the focus or experience of our organsations, how can we effectively embed equity into the grant process? Grants managers sit at the core of knowledge practice and are in a key role to help foundations ask the right questions and hear and see information in ways that matter for impact and social change. In this session, participants will discuss the various aspects of grants management and explore a knowledge framework for embedding equity into change grantmaking. Using a tool to understand the process of the grantmaking and analysis toward deeper equity understanding of the recipient. Participants will discuss the various questions and strategies to help determine whether candidates have these shared values. This session will focus on reigniting the career spark for leaders, who will be inspired to take a personal career inventory of who they are now as leaders and how they want to grow. The presenter will also provide tips and tricks to support that career growth.

Participants will:
- Explore how grant information can become meaningful change data
- Navigate issues of who gets to ask the questions and make sense of the answers
- Target knowledge leverage points in ongoing foundation activity
- Discuss how to “speak up” to power while learning with communities not traditionally heard

Leading Change as a Grants Manager

Learning Track: Leadership
Level: General
Room: Narcissus/Orange Blossom

Emily Wester, Senior Manager of Programs, Grantmakers for Effective Organizations (GEO)

Susan Clark, Grants Manager, Gaylord and Dorothy Donnelley Foundation

Genise Singleton, Program Operations Manager, The Kresge Foundation

As PEAK Grantmaking describes in Successful Structures: Rethinking the Role of Grants Management, many foundations are breaking down silos to better connect strategy, learning, and impact. As a result, the role of grants managers is shifting along with organizational structures and culture. Grants managers are increasingly leading change efforts and pushing their organizations toward greater efficiency and effectiveness. However, change is hard. Change sometimes includes ambiguity and resistance, and often the most difficult part of managing change is leading others through the process, especially in situations where one has influence but not authority. Being an effective change leader requires self-awareness and strong communication and relationship-building skills. While there isn’t a magic formula for change leadership, there are frameworks and tips that can make the process easier.

In this session, you’ll hear an overview of a few change frameworks (including Iceberg Model and the Kubler-Ross Change Curve). Two current participants in our Change Leaders in Philanthropy Fellowship program (a 10-month cohort program dedicated to leading change) will share how they are applying these frameworks and what they’ve learned so far.

Participants will:
- Learn about common elements of change leadership and various frameworks that illustrate change
- Hear two case studies about how grants managers are applying these frameworks in their work and what they’ve learned so far
- Explore change frameworks and how they may result in stronger change leadership

Managing Both the Art and Science of Results-Tracking

Learning Track: Knowledge Management, Outcomes/Evaluation, Technology
Level: Intermediate
Room: Kahili/Lily

Kerry Medek, Director of Grants Management and Learning, GHR Foundation

Mandy Chapman Semple, Director of Learning and Evaluation, Houston Endowment

Roberto Cremonini, Partner, GivingData

Knowledge management can be difficult and time consuming, and managing grants across teams, departments, and work styles can be frustrating. Tracking the progress and results of grants and major initiatives can be challenging. What’s it all for? Impact! We’re all trying to assess progress towards impact and managing the qualitative and quantitative data needed to get there. Any set of processes and tools requires the art and science of working with numbers, stories, and people to get at the heart of high-quality grants management.

This session explores one foundation’s journey to tackle these challenges through an internal assessment of grants management and program processes, tools, and technology to streamline and integrate how we capture, analyze, and report on results. While there is no one right way to do this, you will learn steps we took to assess our own strengths, weaknesses, and gaps; what we did to align how we work with our guiding principles, culture, vision, and mission; and tools and processes that support a grant portfolio review process that helps us talk about the results of our grantmaking and make data-informed decisions. The approach we took, and the tools and technology we use, are scalable to all types of foundations, both large and small.

Participants will:
- Learn a practical approach to managing knowledge and data that achieves objectives across grants management, programs, and grantee partners, with a particular focus on a regular cycle of grant portfolio review to inform and refine grantmaking
- Understand how to conduct a gap analysis on internal processes, tools, and technology to assess the effectiveness and quality of one’s approach to managing grants across a lifecycle and different departments and teams
- Learn about change management processes that can support project managers when they’re implementing new approaches and/or technology

Maximizing Your Impact: Risk Management in Grantmaking

Learning Track: Effective Practices
Level: General
Room: Grand Ballroom—Salons 1-5

Maya Winkelstein, Executive Director, Open Road Alliance

Funders are often described—and describe themselves—as being able to take risks that neither the private sector nor the government can or will take. However, no industry standard currently exists for defining, assessing, and managing risk in philanthropy. Few grantmakers assess risk during the application process and even fewer have processes in place to manage risks to impact after a grant is made. Without being aware of the parameters of risk, one can’t adequately plan or manage risk—let alone take risk. This gap materially contributes to sub-optimal planning, implementation, and transparent and/or trusting interactions between funders and grantees. While managing risk is a shared responsibility, funders are in a unique position to foster an environment that allows nonprofits to be more transparent about possible risks to impact and more trusting of funders as partners for impact. In this working session, Open Road Alliance will introduce the topic of risk management in philanthropy as well as a toolkit it helped produce in 2016 that can be adopted or adapted for considering risk practices more fully in grantmaking work.

Participants will:
- Hear about the latest research and case studies about the state of risk in philanthropy
- Learn best practices for risk management in grantmaking
- Explore risk-adjusted grantee-funder communication

Participants will:
- Understand how to create and implement a technology strategy that includes a holistic view of the pros and cons of the software platform, buy-in from key stakeholders, and a focus on ROI as well as costs
- Learn about five types of software that are useful for foundations and grantmaking charities
- Be able to plan a successful implementation that sets up your organization for long-term success

Philanthro-Ethics: How to Be an Ethical Funder

LEARNING TRACK: Compliance, Effective Practices, Leadership
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Camellia/Dogwood
#PEAK2018 #philanthroethics

Richard Marker, Faculty Co-Director, Funder Executive Education Program, University of Pennsylvania Center for High Impact Philanthropy
Kimberly Canfield, Grants Manager, Peter G. Peterson Foundation

This series of real life case scenarios examines the intersection of law, ethics, and best practices. The scenarios cover everything from grantmaker practice to grantmaking behavior to relationships with grantees. Not everyone knows the laws, but that’s the easy part. Ethics are challenging when there are competing claims. The presenter will provide tools for making responsible decisions.

Participants will:
- Understand the differences between law, ethics, and best practices—and how to implement or develop operating policies reflecting that understanding
- Develop an enhanced awareness of “conscious use of self” in relation to grantees, especially regarding the implicit power imbalance of all funder relationships
- Learn a methodology to reinforce equity practices among grantees

How Accessible Is Your Grantmaking?

Sponsored by SmartSimple
LEARNING TRACK: Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion, Technology
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Poinsettia/Quince
#PEAK2018 #DIE #equity #technology @SmartSimpleSaaS

Mark Bridge, User Interface Lead & Training Officer, SmartSimple

With nearly 1 in 5 Americans living with a disability, grantmakers must consider how they provide fair, equitable access to their funding programs for their communities. Access to technology in a way that respects the dignity and independence of all people is a right, not a privilege, and it is the law. So what do grantmakers need to know?

Participants will:
- Learn the key components of Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) and understand the physical challenges that these guidelines are rooted in
- Hear a case study about providing the best experience for users with disabilities
- Gain best practice information about how organizations provide equal access and opportunity to people with disabilities

SESSION DESCRIPTIONS

Continual improvement can benefit the field. On this journey, we’ve identified a set of principles that grantmakers can adopt to strengthen their commitment to good grantmaking. Join us as we introduce these principles to the field and engage in a discussion on their viability and keys to adoption.

Participants will:
- Learn about the principles of PEAK Grantmaking
- Understand the strong case behind each of the principles
- Contribute to further development of ideal practices within each principle

SHORT TALKS AND SESSIONS
Tuesday, March 20
2:00pm – 3:30pm

You will have the option to attend either two short talks or one Partner Sponsored Session. Each of the 25-minute short talks will be presented twice and will be followed by a 15-minute Q&A.

SHORT TALKS
Round 1: 2:00pm – 2:25pm • Round 1 Q&A: 2:25pm – 2:40pm
Round 2: 2:50pm – 3:15pm • Round 2 Q&A: 3:15pm – 3:30pm

GMS Launch Readiness
LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices, Technology
LEVEL: Intermediate
ROOM: Hibiscus/Iris
#PEAK2018 #GMSlaunchreadiness #GMsystems

Crystal Mathews, Foundation Project Director, Sputnik Moment

Moving to a new grants management system can be scary! In this session, learn how concrete preparation steps, and some fun, can turn a daunting project into a very exciting one. Session topics include: organizing the project team and selecting “super users,” identifying key decision makers, learning how to document existing business processes, determining how and when to complete data review and clean up, reviewing and editing current email/mail merge templates, creating an internal communications plan for user adoption, and, if the new system is going to impact them, creating a grantee communications plan.

Participants will:
• Learn the key elements needed to prepare for a GMS launch
• Understand approximate time frames to complete the preparation process
• Learn how to make the process fun

The Head (Data) and Heart (People) of Inclusion Work
LEARNING TRACK: Leadership
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Kahili/Lily
#PEAK2018 #headandheart #DEI

Denise Barreto, Managing Partner, Relationships Matter Now, LLC

We need both our heads and our hearts to do inclusive philanthropy work. And the connection of the head (data) and the heart (people and their stories) is often missed, especially in turbulent times. This quick talk will challenge you on how to connect the head and heart to the underrepresentation that is rampant in philanthropy today and equip you to tell a more inclusive story about yourself and your organization as a remedy.

Participants will:
• Understand how their personal story is relevant to their institution’s story
• Reflect on and gain practical tips for telling their story more concisely
• Hear techniques for closing the underrepresentation gap in their organization

Hear What Is Not Said: A Look at Nonverbal Communication
LEARNING TRACK: Leadership
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Salon 8
#PEAK2018 #nonverbalcomms #seeithearit

LaShonda Barnett, Manager—Grants & Research, Dallas Women’s Foundation
Katrin Blucker Ludwig, Community Grants Manager, Methodist Healthcare Ministries of South Texas

Your communications with grantees include an invisible element with significant impact. Learn more about how nonverbal communication affects grantor/grantee interaction dynamics, and increase your awareness of the key dynamics at play and how to effectively and purposefully communicate through your expressions and posture. This short talk will provide an opportunity for lively discussion and provide simple modifications each of us can make in our body language. Participants’ activity will include imitating some of the behaviors discussed. You will leave this session with a better understanding of nonverbal signals and how they may be perceived, and able to apply that knowledge in your communications with peers and grantees.

Participants will:
• Learn different aspects of nonverbal communication (eyes, mouth, posture, etc.)
• Share experiences of the power dynamic between grantor and grantee—and how nonverbal signals may impact interactions
• Practice nonverbal skills (handshakes, entering a room, power pose, etc.)

How to Play the Game When the Rules Aren’t Clear
LEARNING TRACK: Compliance, Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion, Effective Practices, Leadership
LEVEL: Intermediate
ROOM: Salon 6
#PEAK2018 #international #grantmaking

Martha Lackritz-Peltier, Senior Counsel, TechSoup’s NGOsource

The complexities of international grantmaking are not always well understood, and often leave funders in a state of uncertainty in terms of how to address some of the “between the lines” situations the grantmakers often encounter. This session will focus on the ambiguities international funders may face, and offers suggestions about how to tackle these challenges head-on.

Participants will:
• Learn what some of these unclear compliance-related situations in international grantmaking look like
• Discover tools and resources to handle these situations in an ethical manner
• Understand how they can bring a critical eye to their own work
Implementing a Strategic Plan to Accelerate Outcomes: An Organizational Case-Study

LEARNING TRACK: Compliance, Effective Practices, Outcomes/Evaluations
LEVEL: Intermediate

Gabriel Thompson, Director of Portfolio Operations and Performance, California Institute for Regenerative Medicine
Jennifer Mielnicki, Grants Management Specialist, California Institute for Regenerative Medicine

Your organization has undertaken a strategic planning process that allows the team to rethink how it conducts its business. Out of that process, an actionable five-year roadmap has been put into place with limited time to show a meaningful impact on the field. How can grants management influence and participate in this plan, its effective implementation, and ongoing monitoring? This session will focus on how the California Institute for Regenerative Medicine—a task with operationalizing a strategic plan to accelerate scientific outcomes—leveraged its grantmaking processes to align grantee funding with scientific outcomes, eliminated non-value adding steps, streamlined portfolio performance, and contract terms to provide simplicity and clarity to the funding process while improving philanthropy are exploring a new approach—GrantAdvisor, which launched in California and Minnesota in 2017 with a goal of improving philanthropy are exploring a new approach—GrantAdvisor, which launched in California and Minnesota in 2017 with a goal of eventually reaching the entire country. Hear from the creators and funders of this project about how this work came about and its potential to improve grantee/funder relations. Come ready to share your questions and feedback with the GrantAdvisor team.

Participants will:
- Explore the importance of funder feedback on improving their grantmaking.
- Understand this new field-wide initiative and how it may impact their organization.

Your Geographic Impact—Splitting Dollars and Cents

LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices, Knowledge Management, Outcomes/Evaluation, Technology
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Camellia/Dogwood
#PEAK2018 #geosplit #grantsmgt

Nicole Austin-Thomas, Assistant Vice President, Grants, Citi Foundation
Janet Nabila, Assistant Vice President, Grants, Citi Foundation

Do you know exactly how much of your grant dollars served a particular country, state, or city? Building a geographic split is the process of creating a report on the geographic allocation of your grant investments. In this session, find out how to follow the dollars to the geographic level using grantee responses and Excel formulas, and how to present this information to stakeholders.

Participants will:
- Understand the benefits of being more granular with geographic reporting.
- Learn how to create and use geographic split reports.
- Discover ways to communicate their findings to stakeholders.

Power to the People: Participatory Grantmaking

LEARNING TRACK: Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion, Effective Practices, Leadership
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Salon 7
#PEAK2018 #participatory #grantmaking

Jen Bokoff, Director of Stakeholder Engagement, Foundation Center
Arlene Wilson-Grant, Grants Manager, Disability Rights Fund

GrantCraft, a service of Foundation Center, has researched participatory grantmaking for the past year, and will publish a guide in summer 2018. This short talk will feature highlights from the research and some voices from the field.

Participants will:
- Learn what participatory grantmaking is (and is not).
- Understand what makes it work (and not work).
- Understand its benefits and challenges.

2020 Census: Why Your Foundation Should Care About a Fair and Accurate Census

LEARNING TRACK: Knowledge Management
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Hibiscus/Iris

Keely Monroe, Democracy Program Manager, Funders’ Committee for Civic Participation (FCCP)

The decennial census controls billions of dollars in federal funding and determines political representation at the state and federal levels. Decade after decade, the same groups are undercounted on the census—low-income people, people of color, those experiencing housing instability, immigrants, and other oppressed communities—meaning that federal funding and political power become more entrenched in the most privileged communities.

The lack of sufficient funding, a growing climate of fear in immigrant communities, and congressional attacks on federal data collection could undermine the next census, especially in historically undercounted communities.

The presenter will educate funders about why the 2020 Census should be a priority for them, regardless of their issue-focus area, and provide them with a case for incorporating the census as part of their grantmaking and their work. Funders will leave the session with an understanding of how the census intersects with a range of democracy, social justice, and community issues, as well as resources on how to integrate the 2020 Census into their programming.

Participants will:

• Have a clear understanding of why they should care about a fair and accurate census
• Leave the session with a summary of key upcoming census milestones and a timeline for 2020 Census advocacy and outreach
• Understand the multiple ways that they can promote, influence, participate, and invest in the census
• Get an overview of the coordinated strategies and practical structures and tools available at the national, state, and regional levels for funders to immediately plug in to
• Develop a basic (and scalable) work plan for how their foundation could get involved with the 2020 Census in their city/state/region or at the federal level
Employee Engagement: What Is the Impact?
LEARNING TRACK: Effective Practices
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Poinsettia/Quince
#PEAK2018 #employeegiving #employeengagement

Kim Armstrong, Community Programs Manager, Mutual of Omaha
Stacey Smida, Grants Manager, Cargill
Sunny Virella, Community Development Specialist, Microsoft

A proven fact: employees that are engaged and passionate about their work are less likely to look outside of a company for new opportunities. Many corporations have employee giving programs like matching gifts or campaign-type programs. What are some best practices that are being implemented? There is no doubt that volunteer engagement is self-rewarding and serves as both a personal commitment and representation of the company. How do companies encourage, reward, and balance employee passion? What are key strategies and practices that keep companies at the top of their employee engagement game?

Participants will:
• Learn how one corporation has transitioned from a traditional campaign-style giving program toward an open choice and open giving program
• Receive best practice information for creating tools and resources for employees

The Evolution of Grants Management and You
LEARNING TRACK: Leadership
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Salon G
#PEAK2018 #GRevolution #grantsmgmt

Sara Davis, Director, Grants Management, The William and Flora Hewlett Foundation

The role and function of grants management continues to evolve in organizations across the philanthropic sector. We are performing new roles, taking on new responsibilities, and expanding our impact within the sector. This dynamic time of change requires us to develop new skills, communicate differently, and look ahead to the future in order to be ready. In this interactive session, we will discuss the evolution of grants management and explore the change we are all experiencing.

Participants will:
• Leave with new strategies to add even more value to their organization and further their careers

Health Equity Assessment and Strategy Development
LEARNING TRACK: Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion, Leadership
LEVEL: General
ROOM: Camellia/Dogwood
#PEAK2018 #DEI #equity #assessment

Catherine Luce, MBA, Grants Manager, Maine Health Access Foundation
Joke Grindle, Program Officer, Maine Health Access Foundation
Gloria Aponte Clarke, MPH, Community Advisory Committee, Maine Health Access Foundation

Throughout 2017, the Maine Health Access Foundation (MeHAF) undertook a comprehensive effort to analyze and develop approaches to address issues of health equity. The foundation formed an equity subcommittee comprised of members of the board of trustees and the community advisory committee. The subcommittee conducted site visits with nonprofit organizations working in the field; planned and participated in a full-day training on equity issues with the full board, staff, and community advisory committee; and worked with consultants to conduct an internal assessment, which included an examination of their grantmaking and other processes, as well as interviews with more than 30 internal and external stakeholders. The learning from this combination of activities shaped a set of recommendations for more equitable practices across all of the foundation’s activities. MeHAF will share the progress it has made to develop a shared framework and language for DEI for their organization in the areas of grantmaking strategy, leadership voice and visibility, and internal operations and culture.

Participants will:
• Learn how equity work necessitates change inside of institutions, alongside and in service to change in communities.
• Understand that an equity lens can influence how grantmaking priorities are identified and pursued

Improv Comedy for Grants Managers (Seriously!)—A Fresh Take
LEARNING TRACK: Leadership
LEVEL: Intermediate
ROOM: Azalea/Begonia
#PEAK2018 #GImprov

Jen Bokoff, Director of Stakeholder Engagement, Foundation Center
Liz Donohue, Grants Administrator, Rockefeller Philanthropy Advisors

Building off “Improv Comedy for Grants Managers (Seriously!),” we will explore how to apply the fundamentals of improv in the workplace. At our 2016 and 2017 annual conferences, presenters led participants through various games to introduce some improv comedy basics. This year, Jen and Liz will show you how to take those basics to the next level.

Participants will:
• Use “Yes, And” to build bridges instead of road blocks
• Show up to meetings ready to contribute and collaborate
• Discover how to turn mistakes into opportunities
• Adapt to change and ambiguity

NOTE: Session is limited to 36 participants to make this a truly unique and personal learning experience. Arrive early to get a seat.

Making Your Grants Knowledge #OpenForGood

Janet Camarena, Director, Transparency Initiatives, Foundation Center
Hope Lyons, Director of Program Management, Rockefeller Brothers Fund
Jeff Ubois, Senior Program Officer, John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation
Laia Grilo, Director, Data Discovery, Foundation Center

Join us to learn about how and why publicly sharing your grants data and related knowledge is a smart way to extend the impact of your grant-making. An increasing volume of knowledge about problems, potential solutions, progress, and outcomes is now being stored in online grants management platforms. What would happen if just a fraction of this data was available to the social sector as a whole? Attend this session to learn about exciting experimentation in opening up grants data for the greater good. A featured case study will include the MacArthur Foundation’s efforts to make its 100&Change competition as transparent as possible by sharing its treasure trove of unfunded applicant submissions designed to solve a critical issue of our time. What will you #OpenForGood?

Participants will:
• Learn about the #OpenForGood movement and new tools to facilitate building collective knowledge bases
• Understand how and when to open up
A Practical Guide to Developing Measurable Outcomes

Learning Track: Knowledge Management, Outcomes/Evaluation
Level: General
Room: Salon 7
#PEAK2018 #outcomes #grantoutcomes
Lisa M. Nespeca, Owner, ChangeVantage Consulting
How can philanthropies know whether their investments are having the intended impact? Understanding how limited philanthropic dollars can be invested most effectively requires evidence-based analysis. Collecting data from grantees across program areas to determine whether and how desired outcomes are being achieved is an important way to provide fact-based support for decision making. Consistent data collection will enable an organization to track impact over time and across grantees. Participants will:
• Learn to use data, and how and why to collect it
• Understand what outcomes are and how to develop them
• Understand what indicators are and how to develop them

Revisiting Reporting

Learning Track: Effective Practices
Level: General
Room: Kahili/Lily
#PEAK2018 #revisitingreporting
Jessica Bearman, Consultant, Bearman Consulting
Elizabeth Myrick, Consultant, Elizabeth Myrick Consulting, LLC
Reporting can be one of the most pivotal points in the grantmaking process. A careful balance must be met in order to ensure grants are on the right track. Ask for too little information and there’s no way you can be sure your grantmaking is reaching the outcomes you set out to accomplish. Too much reporting drains your grantees’ resources. In order to find the best practices for reporting, Jessica Bearman, aka Dr. Streamline, set out to find out how grantmakers across the field were striking this delicate balance and whether any best practices had emerged that should be brought to prominence. Come hear about some of her findings and engage in a discussion to see what next steps your organization can take around this critical practice area.

Participants will:
• Understand the current state of reporting practice
• Gain knowledge of effective reporting practices and how foundations are streamlining the reporting process
• Consider which of these practices would help you achieve impact in your grantmaking and how to implement them

Artificial intelligence still feels futuristic and perhaps even scary, but it’s alive and in use around us every day—just like your smartphone and in-home concierges Alexa and Google Home. The technologies we’ve begun to use regularly to check the weather or look for take-out restaurants can also greatly improve the way we manage, track, review, and improve grants on a daily basis.

Participants will:
• Learn how intelligent automation, machine learning, and chatbots could help streamline your programs’ processes and enhance your application and review experience
• Understand how deep learning could analyze your data in new ways to better predict and enhance outcomes and impact

Nonprofit organizations depend on grant funding to support and grow their programs. But, for many nonprofits, looking and applying for funding can be overwhelming, and they often struggle with identifying the right opportunities and navigating application processes. In this session, the presenters will explore how funders can better support grantseekers in their search for funding, which can lead to higher caliber grant requests from a new generation of problem-solvers poised to make an enormous impact.

Participants will:
• Understand the common obstacles grantseekers face when searching and applying for grant funding
• Learn how to structure processes to better align with the needs of grantseekers and yield better, more qualified proposals
• Explore how supporting grantseekers will help you leverage your resources and optimize your impact
